Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 08 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Less cold today. Turning colder in the north tomorrow.

Today:
Rather cloudy but less cold and mostly dry for many today. Probably still the odd bright spell though, and chance of scattered showers this afternoon. More unsettled over Scotland where rain at times this afternoon. Northern Scotland windy, especially later.

Tonight:
Early evening rain over southern Scotland will move across Northern Ireland and northern England into central UK overnight. Wintry showers follow into the north. Northern Scotland very windy this evening.

Friday:
Much colder for Scotland, Northern Ireland and northern England where also snow showers, mainly northern Scotland. Elsewhere, less cold with showery rain for some but very far southern England dry.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Wintry showers in places Saturday, though some more persistent rain and snow possible for southern England. More settled Sunday, with showers for the north Monday. Generally cold. Night frosts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.